Easing Tax Burdens

From no less an authority on government than Congressman Joseph W. Martin Jr., of Massachusetts, comes a flat declaration that our tax burdens could be lightened.

A former speaker of the House with 35 years experience in Washington, Congressman Martin knows the federal scene intimately. So his words should command attention.

"There is not a single government department, including the military, which could not run for substantially less money without impairment to any essential public service, if there is the will and determination to do so," he said. Considering the size of the tax load we carry as individuals, this statement is important.

When a legislator of the stature of ex-Speaker Martin says economics can be accomplished without impairing "any essential public service," it's time these economies are put in operation.

But that, exactly, seems to be the problem. Who is to do the trimming. Neither the Republican Party in which he is so influential, nor the Democratic Party, shows a disposition to spend less money.

Real Need For Shortway

Keystone Shortway Assn. with headquarters at Williamsport sees the Pennsylvania Turnpike traffic jams pointing to a real need for the Shortway across

If the jams become numerous and grow in volume, they will support this argument in vigorous fashion.

Cited in the Shortway's news bulletin is the jam on Sunday night, Nov. 29. In addition, the bulletin expresses apprehension lest other holiday periods bring a repetition in intensified form.

As to the Nov. 29 experience, State Police were quoted as saying that eastbound traffic on the Turnpike was stalled as much as ten miles on the western entrance of Laurel Tunnel, about seven miles west of Somerset, and that westbound traffic was backed up as much as ten miles on the eastern end of Allegheny Tunnel, 12 miles east of

The further comment was made: such snail pace and bumper-to-bumper movement of vehicles was never intended on a superhighway, which is designed to move traffic at greater than normal

Even with a second set of tunnels on each side of the medial strip, the Turnpike will still be a bulging artery and will continue to grow worse as motor

This is the season of year when the artist that lurks in almost everybody comes into full flower. It may be merely in the matter of decorating a Christmas package that they create their masterpieces.

Which I admire, but don't envy. That may be sour grapes, since even when I want a package to look pretty, the corners are never hospital-crisp and wrinkles develop in unlikely places. Mostly however it's because I can't reconcile paying more for the paper than for the budget-priced gift it en-

The Wyckoff Shopper

The next advance came in 1876 when Fred and Otto Kampfe of Brooklyn, New York added a guard to the blade and produced the first safety razor. This development led to a number of quick advances. King Gillette invented the replaceable blade razor in 1895 and thus eliminated the necessity of honing. Col. Schick On display were samples of the Russell Kresge; planist, Mrs. followed in 1925 with his Schick Magazine Repeating Ra-100 corsages which Mrs. Paul Emma Buskirk; assistant, Kath- zor which allowed blade-changing without the necessity for touching the blades. Strangely enough, these two men, who made the greatest contributions to shaving, both died in 1937.

The culmination of this long development of a civicreamy tapioca pudding gives lized shaving instrument was the patenting of the Schick Dry Shaver in 1928.

> The original idea for a shaving instrument which could operate without water, soap and scraping blade occurred to Col. Jacob Schick while on duty with the Army in Alaska in the early years of this century. The obvious difficulty of blade shaving in a cold climate undoubtedly led him to try to think of a better method.

> A number of accounts have been published describing the circumstances under which Jacob Schick first conceived the idea which founded an industry. The most colorful one is probably apocryphal, but is within the realm of possibility, considering the unusual quali-ties of the man involved. According to this version, Col. Schick was hunting in Alaska and shot a moose. As he ran toward the wounded animal, he fell and sprained his ankle badly enough so that he could not walk. The moose provided food and a nearby stream provided water and, the story says, the Colonel thus kept himself alive until he could walk again. During the several days of enforced idleness he worked out the basic principles of electric shaving.

> Whether or not the moose was in any sense a midwife to the birth of electric shaving, Col. Schick experimented for a good many years just before and after World War I and finally patented his invention in

> He sold his interest in the Magazine Repeating Razor, which is still being manufactured in modified form by Eversharp-Schick, and was able to raise enough money to form Schick Dry Shaver Inc. And in 1930 he opened the first plant to manufacture the shaver in Stamford, Connecticut.

> By that time the Colonel had solved the basic problems involved in translating his ideas into a marketable product. Up to that time there had been no electric motor available small enough and powerful enough to drive a shaving head and fit within the case of a shaver. The impulse motor developed by the Colonel for this specific application was the most powerful of its size in

> The first factory was a small loft workroom with a handful of employees who made a few shavers each day which the Colonel sold in New York at $25.00 each. Total production for the first year was 3,000 today's average hourly output. Incidentally, there are men working in the plant today who also worked with the Colonel during those early, exciting years.

> In spite of the fact that the new industry had been launched in the depths of the depression, the tremendous advance in shaving technique was recognized, and in 1931, 10,000 units were manufacturered and the price could be reduced to $15.00. By the end of 1936 a million Schick shavers were in use and modern shaving was off to a flying start.

Today Schick electric razors are prized by men and women everywhere. Buy yours-for Christmas giving-

This House Is Full of "Don'ts!"

You don't have to worry about closet and bedroom space in this hilltop home. It has three large bedrooms and oodles of storage space! You don't have to worry about the view because this home solves the problem of how to have suburban privacy and still be right in the best residential section of East Stroudsburg!

You don't have to drive the children to school every day, because it's only two blocks away! And you can walk to the business section in five minutes!

You don't have to worry about cold floors or chilly, winter drafts. Rooms are toast warm thanks to a cozy fireplace, wall-to-wall carpet and an efficient oil-fired heating plant that costs about $150 a year to operate!

You don't have to worry about your car sitting out in the open. A good-sized garage is only a patio walk

You don't have to worry about "bathroom traffic jams" in the modern bathroom! And you don't have to worry about spending a lot of money and time putting in a spacious lawn, shrubbery and hig shade trees; everything is there already for your enjoy-

And best of all, you don't have to worry about high monthly mortgage payments, because you can own all this right now for only $15,000. So why worry! Call Mr. Somers right now (HA 1-3000) and make an appointment to see this 'don't worry" home
